THE JUDGE'S STORY.

"I don't see how I could have done more for him than I did; but still the man should not have been punished--he should have been acquitted."

With these words the Judge awoke to the consciousness that he had a fellow-traveler; and then, as if some explanation of his remark would be in order, he went on:

"We had a very interesting trial in Austin last week. Tom Carberry--Irish Tom he is called--was tried for murder. I defended him, and never struggled harder for a client in my life. For a week before, and throughout the trial, I worked night and day to look up testimony, and to present the case to the jury in the best possible light. I consulted with all the attorneys not engaged for the prosecution. We got him off with three years in the penitentiary, but he ought not to have been punished--he should have been acquitted."

A CHARITY CHIME.

BY MARY E. GRISWOLD.
Morning dawned over the city, and down from Oliver's brow
Drooped a mist-vail of magical whiteness,
As pure as a vesper vow;
The air was with sweet life pulsing, and
The lily's fragrant heart
Swung gently in chalice of incense, where
The Master kneel apart.

All night he had prayed and wrestled 'mid
The mountain's dusky calm.
The sinless one for the sinful, thus winning
The victor's palm;
And now he leads to the temple, with
Smiles and gentle talk,
Like cathedral aisle, made sacred each
Step of that lonely walk.

The people throng about him, and fairer
Than blessed taper.
Concentrated for eye by prayer, and the wreathing incense vapor.
Glowed those eyes of tenderest azure, from
The lips such pearls of praise,
Falling on those eager spirits, sent a glory
Through their days.

Ab, those words! like holy chant coming
After vesper call;
And the smile! as sweet as saints, long
Invested with the palm.
Lo! the bell of God's great peace through
The hushed air softly swings
And they felt the shining ones sometimes
Brush them with their wings.

Up the aisle came hurrying footsteps; see,
The haughty hieing is there,
And the Pharisee's broad phylacteries
Seem to stir the dreamy air--
Ever in the world's glad peace breathes an Undernote of woe!
Side by side, like shine and shadow, pure
And wreathed come and go.

Slowly bowed the blessed head, till the wealth of auburn hair
Veiled the eyes of wondrous pity--was
There thought of vengeance there?
Ah! the voice of tender pathos: "Let the sinless cast a stone."
One by one the crowd departed, leaving
but the twain alone.

Bowing low, with a sweep of glossy hair
round the oval curve of face,
Shame, remorse the poor soul crushing,
Near the holy altar placed Fearful answer to His question, few the words and quickly said,
And her voice was sad and low, like a prayer beside the dead.

"Go, sin no more!" Passed she out, into whiteness and the calm.
Wreathed the sword of earthly justice
with the lily and the balm.
In her soul the fair white petals blossomed
after pain and loss,
Dear Christ-love that works such healing,
there is crowning for the cross.

COMMUNITY IS DOWN ON MURDER, AND HE would have been hanging from an awning beam in fifteen minutes. Killing is a very different matter. When two men get into a fight, and all is fair between them, and one kills the other, community don't ordinarily seem much concerned on the subject. Under such circumstances, the only way for Montana was to provoke Tom to a quarrel, and lead him to fight. But Tom wasn't disposed to gratify him--he would not take any notice--didn't seem to hear; but repeatedly left one saloon to go to another, just to keep out of the way. Montana followed him up, on it, at last, standing right before Tom, he came down with a heavy jar, and said: 'I'm Chief!' Even this Tom didn't resent, and when he got up and went away to his room to bed, there wasn't one of them to say a good word for him.

"MONTANA ENJOYED A SEASON OF GLORY.

He had said, 'I'm Chief!' in a public place and no man had dared to accept the challenge.

"The next morning Tom was standing on the sidewalk, when Montana came along, and they met face to face. Tom spoke to him in a very quiet, low tone, saying:

"Stranger, you used me pretty rough last night, but I don't bear malice. Jest say that you'd been drinkin' and didn't mean it, and we'll say no more about it."

"MONTANA ANSWERED: 'NO APOLOGIES

IN MINE."

"Well," said Tom, "you needn't apologize; come into the saloon and chink glasses with me, and we'll let the matter drop."

"Then Montana said: 'Tom Carberry, either you're generous, or else you're a coward. I don't think you're cowardly, an' if I'd known you at the start, it's most likely I wouldn't have waded in. But the matter can't be let drop, for there's hundreds of people in my section an' between here an' there who know that I came here to kill you; so there's but two ways--we must fight, or you must run. If you'll run, it'll be just as good to me as to fight."

"TOM'S ALMOST SUPPLIANT BEARING

disappeared on the instant, and he said: 'Stranger, I ain't much in the habit o' runnin', an' if we're to fight, we may as well have it out now as any time. Are you heeled?'

"Tom asked this question because we have a law against carrying concealed weapons, which is regarded at such hours as people think they will have no use for their arms, and disregarded at all others.

"The answer was: 'No, I left my revolver with the barkeeper of the Exchange.'

"Get it," said Tom, 'and I'll wait for you here.'

"I AM MAKING A LONG STORY OF THE shooting, which in reality was very soon over. They fired three shots apiece in as many seconds. Tom's third ball passed through Montana's heart, and he was dead before his head rebounded on the brick pavement. Carberry surrendered himself at once, and was kept in jail until his trial came off, although ball to any amount was offered."

After a pause, the Judge added: "I don't see how I could have done more for him than I did; but the man should not have been punished--he should have been acquitted; and he would have been but for one circumstance, which prejudiced the court and jury against him."

"What was the circumstance so prejudicial?" questioned the listener.

"The Montana chap was the fourth man Tom had killed in Austin," answered the Judge, innocently.---[Overland Monthly.
